

Getting the most from Census Records

Census records in Ireland

Considerations

- Records from 1821 can be unreliable
 - Not taken on a specific night – people could be recorded twice.
 - Townland boundaries undefined
 - Language
- 1841 was the first census taken on a specific night.
- 1851 fragments for Kilworth - transcription
- Early records valuable from a family history perspective.
- Census summaries from 1831:

Search the census records for Ireland 1901 and 1911

- Census records were recorded by District Electoral Division (DED)
- You can ‘search’ the records, but you need to get spelling exactly right and you also need to know the relevant DED.
- You can use a ‘wildcard’ (*), but the spelling needs to be nearly right. For example, my home townlands won’t be found using a ‘wildcard’. Kilarrive is Kilarrin and Strawhall is St. Raw Hall. Therefore, ‘browse’ is also needed.
- Either way, the DED is needed. This can be found at www.townlands.ie.

OHPR News and Notices

The OHPR project moved out of its development phase in April 2007. The site has been relatively static since then.

We are pleased to pass on the news that the Central Statistical Office Ireland has published the Irish census reports from 1926 to 1991 (a total of 12 censuses) on their website.

If you have trouble finding any relevant report which you would expect to be here, please email us at help@ukdataservice.ac.uk.

Histpop - The Online Historical Population Reports Website

A collection of British Historical Population Reports

The Online Historical Population Reports (OHPR) collection provides online access to the complete British population reports for Britain and Ireland from 1801 to 1937.

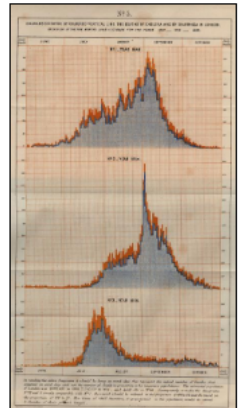

The collection goes far beyond the basic population reports with a wealth of textual and statistical material which provide an in-depth view of the economy, society (through births, deaths and marriages) and medicine during the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

These 200,000 pages of census and registration material for the British Isles are supported by numerous ancillary documents from The National Archives, critical essays and transcriptions of important legislation which provide an aid to understanding the context, content and creation of the collection.

In digitising this resource the OHPR has enabled Browsing through the collection by date or geography, or Searching the content directly. Documents relating to the digitization and web development process may be accessed via the Project tab.

OHPR is an AHDS History project, funded as part of the JISC Digitisation programme and is hosted by the UK Data Archive at the University of Essex.

Note to genealogists and others tracing individuals: This site only contains a very small number of reproductions of original census enumerators' books for illustrative purposes. If you are trying to trace individuals in historical British censuses you should use the links found on our links page.

A large orange circle is positioned on the left side of the slide, partially cut off by the edge.

Additional value from census records

- The most extensive fragments are from 1821.
 - Comparison between 1821 and 1901/1911 – if you are lucky.
 - Family structure
 - Marriage age
 - Family size
 - Family continuity
 - Adult children at home
- A series of yellow dashed line segments are arranged in a curved, upward-pointing arc in the bottom right corner of the slide.

Summary

- Great value to be obtained from looking at all the available records
- Social information
- If possible, comparative analysis with fragments
